2 Ways To Celebrate AAC Awareness Month

Providing evidence-based instruction for students who use AAC is essential, not only in October, but all year-round. With advances in technology and increased expectations for students with complex communication needs, how can educators keep up? PATINS has some ideas.

Join the Communication Community of Practice.

Educators can ask questions and share ideas about how to best support, teach, and assess students with complex communication needs.

Register for "Important as ABC: AAC, Behavior, and Classrooms". Join PATINS Specialist, Jessica Conrad, November 15th at Earlywood Education Center for this in-person seminar. Seats are limited so register today for this no-cost training.

Empower Students with Dyslexia

Discover 100 stories from students with dyslexia in Margaret Rooke's Dyslexia Is My Superpower (Most of the Time). It contains tips and strategies for using their creative strengths both in and out of the classroom. Your students will also enjoy the captivating drawings. Teachers will gain insight from the advice section. You can borrow this and other books from our Lending Library.

"If my students use text-to-speech, that's cheating." View a short video debunking this myth. It will explain the benefits of using text-to-speech in your classroom with all students and demonstrate the no-cost app Prizmo Go.

Search "Dyslexia" for More Resources from the Lending Library
